

We purchased a travel trailer in April of 2007 at Lloyd Bridges. When we arrived at Lloyd Bridges the salesman met with us to talk about what we were looking for. He asked questions and helped educate us about the different types of campers. This was very helpful in our process of choosing a camper. He showed several different models. He did not try and rush us to a decision on which camper to buy. We actually went back and fourth between three models. We finally made our choice based on things we wanted and things he gave us to think about. After having the camper for one summer we are very satisfied with our choice. I do not think we would have been happy with what we were planning on buying before we talked with our salesmen. We had to have warranty work completed at the end of the year. Do to our schedule we could not drop it off during normal hours. The service department was flexible and worked out a plan for us.
